PRESIDENT'S REPORT

I hope you escaped damage in Melbourne's huge hail storm a few weeks ago. People have been asking whether global warming created it. I have great respect for the work of Gregg Braden, a scientist who studies ancient texts. His latest book "Fractal Time" addresses 2012 which marks the end of a 5,125 year cycle.

He believes that the bottom line is that time is essentially a wave that is moving in one direction. Right now it's moving from the present to the future. Gregg Braden believes we can influence the very fields that are creating the change – that the Mayans cannot tell us how this cycle ends because we are writing the ending while we're living it right now. The fear about 2012 is stressing a lot of people but according to him, we have the ability to regulate the magnetic field by adjusting the way that we work together through our hearts. The key is: we've got to work together to do it.

You can learn more about Gregg's work at www.greggbraden.com

In response to requests for speakers on dowsing for health, renowned healer, Bernadette Saulenier, is our speaker for the April meeting.

At the beginning of the meeting we will hold our Annual General Meeting. We'll keep it short so that there's time for questions after Bernadette's presentation.

If you have a story about your dowsing experiences, please email it to Heather Wilks for the newsletter.

THE JOY OF SENSITIVE LIVING

By Alanna Moore, February 2010.

For the past 26 years I have worked as a geomancer, assessing and balancing the subtle energies of places with pendulum dowsing and meditational attunement. It's akin to feng shui, but not formula oriented. A geomantic reading of a place seeks out the actual inherent energies there, so it's rather more indigenous than informed by Chinese cultural conditioning, as feng shui is. It thus requires openness and keen sensitivity. You never know what might show up.

I often find high-tech radiation, or geopathic stress from unhealthy underground energies; or perhaps a desecrated sacred site that's causing 'bad vibes'.

On the other hand, beneficial energies can also be created or amplified, harnessed for enhancing plant growth in the garden or for making one's own backyard a sacred site.

DOWSING AT GALLIPOLI

Edited article from the British Society of Dowsters Newsletter: Vol 41, Number 293 September 2006.

By former DSV Vice-President, Richard Slifierz

In the Polish edition of Richard Webster's book, "Dowsing for Beginners", I came across one line of information stating that dowsing was used at Gallipoli by Australian troops during the First World War. Richard is a New Zealand dowser and what surprised me further was that none of my fellow Australian dowsers had any idea about the use of dowsing at Gallipoli. So I set out to find out for sure whether it was true and if so, who used dowsing there.

My lucky break in finding the vital information came by “happy coincidence”.

Over the months of my research in the archives of the Australian War Memorial, Mrs. Mary Pollard, the senior Curator, was very interested and helpful. She drew up short lists of material for me to review and since there are over 10 million objects, of which about 10% have been digitised and made available online, her help was very gratefully received.

I was overjoyed at this link and immediately rang Raymond who confirmed that William Dawkins was indeed a dowser who used his skills at Gallipoli to help his fellow countrymen. And how did he know? Well, William Dawkins’ mother (Raymond’s adopted mother) used to re-read William’s letters for comfort after his death, detailing his exploits at Gallipoli and so Raymond had heard all about Williams’ dowsing. Not only that, he said “Dowsing runs in the family”, and he too is a dowser!

It took a lot of time to track down some of this information, and I am very grateful to the Australian War Memorial staff, in particular Mrs. Pollard. I’d also like to thank Judith Ingle and the relatives of William Dawkins for their help.
